Description	World Vision Lebanon (WVL) designed and implemented a three-year organic agriculture project in Lebanon mainly funded by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID). The project's main aim was to support and boost BioCoop Lubnan, the first Lebanese cooperative for organic agriculture, through strengthening the organic agriculture infrastructure by providing extension, demonstration and training services to BioCoop farmers. In addition the project is helping BioCoop farmers become certified as "organic" by the Mediterranean Institute for Certification (IMC) according to the EEC Reg. No 2092/91 to enable the cooperative to access national and international markets.
